Professional background

Paul Amailuk is a specialist Oral and Maxillofacial surgeon, trained in Australia and New Zealand in the full scope of practice of the surgical specialty including removal of third molars (wisdom teeth), complex extractions, orthodontic exposure of teeth, placement of dental and zygomatic implants, grafting procedures, orthognathic surgery and management of oral pathology and facial trauma.

Paul is a registered dentist and medical doctor, obtaining his medical undergraduate degree with honours from Monash University in Melbourne. He spent two years undergoing sub-specialty training in Head and Neck cancer, Tissue Engineering and Microvascular reconstruction at the University of Miami.

He is currently working as a Consultant Surgeon as part of the Head and Neck Cancer Service at the Gold Coast University Hospital. He places primary importance in helping patients navigate their care journey as smoothly as possible, and believes all patients from simple extractions to complex oncology benefit most from empathy and approachability.
